MARITIME EXECUTIVE NAMED DIRECTOR AND CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER OF THE ALABAMA STATE PORT AUTHORITY

he Alabama State Port Authority board of directors named John C. Driscoll as director and chief executive officer for the Port Authority effective June 1, 2020.

"Over the last several months, the board and Jimmy Lyons worked through a nationwide search to identify a slate of qualified candidates," said Bestor Ward, chairman of the Alabama State Port Authority. "It was John's qualifications that made him the natural choice."

Driscoll most recently served as maritime director at the Port of Oakland in Oakland, California. He had operational and marketing responsibility for one of the nation's top 10 container seaports and was credited with improving that port's operating efficiency, financial performance and community relations. Prior to working in Oakland, Driscoll served as vice president of export sales for CMA CGM (America) LLC, a leading global container shipping group.

Driscoll gained deep international maritime experience and contacts working with Sea-Land Service, Maersk Line and CMA CGM. He successfully developed business operations in the Caribbean, Central America and South America.

"This is a gratifying opportunity and a career highlight," said Driscoll. "I've seen the caliber of people who work here and the contributions the Port of Mobile makes to Alabama, the local community, and global trade. There is so much to be proud of in Mobile. The responsibility in leading this port is fantastic, and we will work together to continue the progress made under Executive Director Lyons."

James K. Lyons, director and chief executive officer emeritus of the Alabama State Port Authority said, "I've observed over the years John's incredible contributions to the industry. His abilities were affirmed through our extensive assessment of his body of work and my conversations with those who have worked with him. I am confident John will be an excellent fit for our seaport, our management team and our employees." Lyons is assisting Driscoll in the transition and serving as director emeritus until his retirement at the end of the year.

Driscoll attended the University of Maryland (College Park) and graduated with a bachelor's degree in Business Management with an emphasis on Transportation and Marketing. He is a native of Bethesda, Maryland. John and his wife, Linda, have three children and currently live in Mobile, Alabama.

Aker Solutions helps the world meet its energy needs. Working to engineer products, systems and services required to unlock energy, Aker Solutions' goal is to maximize recovery and efficiency of oil and gas assets, while using expertise to develop the sustainable solutions of the future. Aker Solutions employs approximately 16,000 people in more than 20 countries.

This agreement lays the foundation for a long-term collaborative relationship incentivizing both Chevron and Aker Solutions to jointly improve long-term performance both technically and commercially through multi-project synergies, execution excellence and repeatability, and life-of-field thinking.

"We are honored to have entered this master order with Chevron and to have been awarded the Anchor work order," said Luis Araujo, chief executive officer of Aker Solutions. "This demonstrates the mutual trust between the two organizations, as well as the capabilities and experience of our umbilicals manufacturing organization in the U.S."

Aker Solutions was at the same time awarded the first work order under the Chevron master order for the Anchor project in the U.S. Gulf of Mexico. The scope includes about 24 kilometers (15 miles) of 20,000 psi dynamic steel tube and power umbilicals and distribution equipment. The deepwater field is located approximately 225 kilometers (140 miles) offshore Louisiana at a water depth of 1,524 meters (5,000 feet).

PROGRESS AROUND THE PORT

APM TERMINALS MOBILE CONTAINER TERMINAL PHASE 3 EXPANSION COMPLETE

Alabama's seaport modernization program continues to complete important milestones to meet shipper demand and accommodate larger vessels. The Alabama State Port Authority completed its 400-foot container dock expansion at the APM Terminals Mobile facility and three days later, the terminal simultaneously handled two container ships for the first time at the newly expanded berth. The berth extension now enables two 8,000-10,000 TEU to be safely and easily handled simultaneously. The quay extension was part of a $50 million Phase 3 expansion that increased terminal capacity and productivity at the 10-year-old APM Terminals Mobile intermodal container complex at the Port of Mobile.

The BELITA, with a length overall of 1,096 feet and the COSCO SANTOS, with a length overall of 856 feet, utilized about 2,100 feet of berth on the newly finished quay. With weekly post-Panamax container ship calls at the APM Terminals-operated facility, the Port Authority quickly invested to remove possible vessel berth conflicts at the terminal. The dock enhancement project also beefed up the mooring and fender systems to accommodate super post-Panamax vessels. The terminal is already equipped with two super post-Panamax and two post-Panamax ship-to-shore gantry cranes to service the larger container class vessels already calling the port.

The APM Terminals Mobile Phase 3 modernization project complements prior investments by the Alabama State Port Authority and APM Terminals totaling $450 million in marine and rail container intermodal terminals. Investments to date will soon be enhanced by the recent U.S. Army Corps of Engineers issued permit and receipt of full federal and state funding to take the Mobile Harbor to -50 feet by 2024. Construction on the channel and harbor improvements is expected to begin later this year.

"We continue to seek out and implement innovative and world class infrastructure to meet the needs of our carriers and shippers," said James K. Lyons, director emeritus for the Alabama State Port Authority. "We're very pleased with both carrier and shipper confidence in our program as they continue to introduce larger ships, add capacity and increase volumes through the Port of Mobile."

Brian Harold, managing director of APM Terminals Mobile said, "We are very excited to complete this project which allows us to offer a significant increase in berthing windows to our customers. This expansion also enables us to offer improved capabilities to quickly service vessels that may arrive ahead-of, or behind schedule."

The new dock is also capable of housing more cranes, which allows additional cranes to be added in the future. Other recent improvements include an expanded outbound gate (from four to six lanes) and an expanded Intermodal Rail Facility (by 10 acres). APM Terminals Mobile currently has four direct all-water weekly services from Asia, calling various ports in China and Southeast Asia; three of them make direct calls in Busan as well.

"The Alabama State Port Authority has been a great partner in growing the container volumes in the Port of Mobile. Since the opening of the container terminal in 2008, we have consistently worked together on short- and long-term commercial efforts, as well as the strategic development plans of the facility," added Harold.

PORT AUTHORITY PIER 2 CRANES COME DOWN

wo familiar icons on the Mobile River waterfront are no Ionger there. Two PACECO Container Gantry Cranes, the 246 and the 400, were dismantled on the Alabama State Port Authority's Pier 2 terminal.

James K. Lyons, director emeritus for the Port Authority said, "These cranes were past their useful life, and our Gottwald Mobile Harbor crane can easily serve the cargo needs of our shippers utilizing Pier 2."

In 2006, the Port Authority acquired both cranes in used condition to serve a rapidly growing containerized cargo business at the Authority's Pier 2, while the new APM Terminals Mobile container terminal was being constructed. When the new container terminal opened in 2008, the two PACECO cranes continued to service general cargo ships that regularly call Pier 2. Obsolete technology and escalating maintenance costs were the two primary reasons for removing the cranes.

Combined, the cranes are comprised of approximately 1.9 million pounds of steel, which will be recycled by regional steel mills. G.A. West, of Creola, Alabama, won the competitive bid work to remove the structures. Cowles, Murphy, and Glover, also of Mobile, Alabama, provided engineering support. The crane removal project was completed the end of May.

ALABAMA U.S. ARMY CORPS OF ENGINEERS SIGN PROJECT AGREEMENT TO DEEPEN AND WIDEN THE PORT OF MOBILE

labama's seaport modernization program reached another critical milestone on June 17, when the state of Alabama and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers entered into the Project Partnership Agreement that will deepen and widen the Port of Mobile. Colonel Sebastien P. Joly, Commander of the Mobile District, and John C. Driscoll, director and chief executive officer of the Alabama State Port Authority, signed the agreement, which allows the Corps of Engineers to move into contracting and construction phases to take the Port of Mobile's federal channel to a depth of 50 feet. Construction is expected to begin on the approximately $365.7 million project by the end of this vear.

The Mobile Harbor modernization program received full federal funding in February upon passage of the Energy & Water Development and Related Agencies Act. # INDUSTRY DAY 2020 or the first time ever, Industry Day was held as a virtual meeting with more than 100 representatives participating in the session. Captain LaDonn Allen, Captain of the Port Sector Mobile, U.S. Coast Guard Sector Mobile; Colonel Sebastian Joly, Commander, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers Mobile District; and John Driscoll, director and CEO of Alabama State Port Authority offered welcoming remarks prior to the discussion of hurricane season, waterways management, coastal office resources and Alabama State Port Authority procedures.

The presentation opened with a hurricane season weather review presented by Jason Beaman, National Weather Service, Mobile and Pensacola region. Beaman shared storm predictions and highlighted useful tools, such as the Coastal Inundation Dashboard that reports on the observed water levels throughout the sector of the Mobile area of responsibility. The NOAA

National Weather Service also profiled a southern region tropical webpage at (www.weather.gov/srh/tropical), as a "onestop shop" for all tropical-related local forecast information, including watches, warnings, threats, impacts, potential impacts for wind, storm, surge, flooding, rain and tornadoes.

Waterways was discussed next by Lieutenant Commander Kelley Brown at Sector Mobile Waterways Management who provided key information in the U.S. Coast Guard area of responsibility. Lt. Cmdr. Brown noted the approximate timing for port status levels and what to expect during these critical status periods, and key online resources for information. This served as a reminder for the importance of timely port checklists.

Chief of Coast Programs Nate Lovelace presented on behalf of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. Lovelace was able to share resources the USACE provides in preparation during and after storms, and also provide local stakeholders of how the dredging schedule looks, as well as the waterway status sheet. The USACE duties include waterway restoration call, updating the emergency phone number and main point of contacts, fueling vehicles and survey vessels, coordinately dredge pre-storm actions, prioritizing survey efforts and participating on port coordination calls.

Alabama State Port Authority's Deputy Director and Chief Operating Officer Rick Clark explained procedures of prep timelines and communications tools the port has in place to effectively communicate at the facility. The prep timeline focused on the hours at which facility prep work takes place and notices are received. Clark shared communications tools including the Alabama State Port Authority hotline number, along with email and phone distributions for storm updates. In the event of an emergency, Alabama State Port Authority emails and texts port users with periodic updates, provides the hotline number for assistance and updates the website and social media platforms accordingly with the port's status.

While this year's Industry Day looked a little different, the purpose remained the same of connecting local stakeholders to discuss plans of action in the event there is a storm this season.

DYNETICS

The race toward more space exploration continues to this day with Huntsville's own, Dynetics. The wholly owned subsidiary of Leidos has been awarded one of three contracts from NASA's Artemis program to design a Human Landing System (HLS). This newly built system is set to take Americans back to the lunar surface by 2024, with NASA selecting the contracting team at the start of 2021.

This $4 billion award was granted to three winners; Blue Origin, SpaceX and Dynetics. While each finalist has their own concept set for a smooth lunar landing, Dynetics believes they have what it takes to set them apart from the competitors before the final selection is made.

"The Artemis program in general, and the Human Landing System specifically, feel like the next great adventure in space," said Andy Crocker, Dynetics HLS deputy program manager. "Establishing a sustainable cadence of trips to the moon - and possibly a permanent human presence there – is essential to building the capabilities for human exploration of Mars and into deeper space. Being a part of that — the opportunity to play a critical role in pushing mankind deeper into space - is why most of us who are involved in the program got into the space business in the first place."

Named after the Greek goddess of the moon, NASA's Artemis program will be run in two different phases. The first phase includes the 10-month base period for all preliminary design work and is then followed with a four-year option period.

Dynetics is known for their innovation and sustainability in projects they work on and complete. With sustainability being extremely important in new engineering of the build in NASA's Artemis program, Dynetics has a simple approach in their process: create a reusable and sustainable flight object, with commercial supported lander capability.

"We believe that sustainability - which is enabled by reusability - is the centerpiece of the whole Artemis program. For the program to truly be successful, it should lay the foundation for a continuous human presence beyond Earth orbit, including near-term Mars missions and human missions into deeper space," said Crocker. "We believe it's critical for the design of the HLS to enable near-term reusability, to be affordable, and to make not only crewed missions but many types of missions - scientific, exploratory, commercial, infrastructure-building, etc. - possible with the same basic design and lunar mission architecture."

During the official launch and flight process, the Dynetics HLS can be fully integrated and launched on a commercial or NASA launch vehicle. This flight system will be designed to comfortably take two crew members from lunar orbit to the lunar surface, and back to United States soil, after landing and surface habitation on the lunar surface for a week.

The moon has had its fair share of robotic visitors in recent years, but history is also in the making during the build of NASA's new HLS. Since the Apollo 17 mission in 1972, no person has visited the moon surface. The selected concept and system will not only be returning American citizens to the lunar surface, but also will be taking the first woman to step foot on the moon.

"HLS, even though in a sense it's a step back (to 50 years ago), feels like the next 'giant leap' forward in terms of where human exploration is headed," said Crocker.

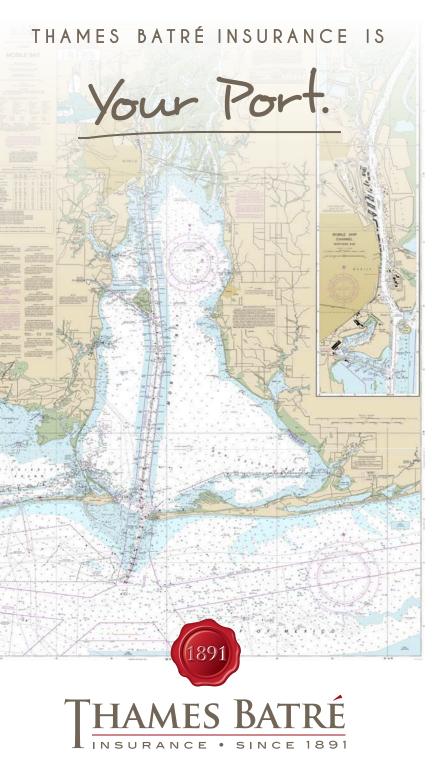

As knowledge of the vastness of outer space continues to grow, Dynetics is ready to help America take one more giant leap for mankind in space exploration.

PORT CALLS: ROBERT TRENT JONES GOLF TRAIL

468 holes. 26 courses. 11 different locations. The Robert Trent Jones (RTJ) Golf Trail has been an Alabama landmark and destination for more than 25 years. Attracting players from all over the world, The Trail has a course fit for golfers looking to experience a world-renowned course, while plaving with scenery of Alabama landscape in the background.

Designed by the premier golf course architect in the world, Robert Trent Jones Sr., The Trail stretches from the rolling hills of northern and central Alabama to the wetlands and woods near the Gulf Coast with more than 100 miles of course built for the golf enthusiast.

"First time visitors can expect a variety of course designs in spectacular settings," said John Cannon, president of Robert Trent Jones Golf Trail. "RTJ reservations team helps golfers plan their trips to match their expectations. Once you arrive at an RTJ location, expect friendly, helpful associates to get you started and quality courses worth the trip."

Since opening in 1992, more than 13 million rounds of golf have been played on the Robert Trent Jones Golf Trail. With guests from all 50 states, and an average of 20 foreign countries, The Trail brings in new faces from new places every single year.

"The typical trail is three to four days, but we certainly have seen golfers stay much longer," said Cannon, "Some golfers have played all the courses in an extended golf trip. Others come back year after year until they have played them all and then start over again."

Each of the 11 locations on The Trail is located within a two-hour drive of the next course, making it easy to plan a golfing retreat. Courses are located in or near Anniston, Auburn, Birmingham, Dothan, Greenville, Hoover, Huntsville, Mobile, Muscle Shoals, Point Clear, and Prattville, with each location being within 15 minutes of a major interstate, convenient for golfers wanting an escape to the green.

With raving reviews from The Wall Street Journal and The New York Times calling The Trail "some of the best public golf in the world," guests at any RTJ location should expect friendly and helpful associates ready to get tee time started.

As COVID-19 continues to impact the community and future travel plans, RTJ locations have set up precautionary measures for visitors' comfort and safety as they take part in the game.

"Unless living in the same household, only one golfer will ride in a cart and contact with the flagstick has been restricted when putting," said Cannon. "Golf works well with social distancing and with the help of our RTJ associates, we are pleased to continue offering access to world-class courses on the Robert Trent Jones Golf Trail.

PORT RECEIVES 2019 GREEN MARINE CERTIFICATION

The Alabama State Port Authority received a certificate for its 2019 participation and performance in the Green Marine Program. Green Marine is the leading environmental certification program for North America's maritime industry and engages ship owners, port authorities, terminal operators, shipyard managers and seaway corporations to benchmark their annual environmental performance. As part of the certification program, participants agree to have their results verified and commit to transparency and continual improvement to earn their Green Marine certification. Green Marine aims to lead worldwide conversations about how to identify emerging issues, set realistic but demanding goals for environmental improvement, and benchmark progress.

VALENTZ NAMED TO NATIONAL MARITIME CYBER SECURITY BOARD

The Alabama State Port Authority's IT Security and Network Infrastructure Manager Brett Valentz was named to the board for directors for the Maritime Transportation System Information Sharing and Analysis Center (MTS-ISAC).

This newly-formed nonprofit organization was created in February 2020 by a group of U.S.-based maritime critical infrastructure stakeholders to promote and facilitate cybersecurity information sharing, awareness, training and collaboration efforts between private and public sector stakeholders. Their mission is to effectively reduce cyber risk across the entire MTS community through improved identification, protection, detection, response, and recovery efforts. ### PROJECT CARGO: FROM ITALY TO ALABAMA

Project cargo originating in Italy recently traveled to Alabama's deep-water seaport and headed to one of Georgia-Pacific's mills in Alabama. Unloaded from the vessel directly onto barge at the Port of Mobile, the tissue machinery and parts were shipped to Georgia Pacific's Naheola Mill in Pennington, Alabama. The agent was Nord Sud Shipping Inc., and the stevedore was Premier Bulk Stevedoring. Barnhart Crane & Rigging provided barge services for the project cargo movement.

This project cargo is integral to a recent $120 million investment at the mill for a new tissue machine and roll storage building to support the company's retail bath tissue business. The new tissue machine is replacing two older machines, increasing capacity, supporting new tissue converting lines, and continuing investments to modernize the Naheola mill.

The Naheola mill employs more than 900 people and produces retail bath tissue and paper towels used by consumers across the county. The mill also makes bleached paperboard which is sold on the market and used to make Georgia-Pacific's Dixie plates, cups and bowls. Across Alabama, Georgia-Pacific currently operates eight facilities, employs more than 2,600 employees directly, pays more than $204 million in direct wages and benefits and creates more than 9,300 jobs indirectly in the state.

In the past five years, capital investment at the Naheola mill has totaled more than $500 million, and Georgia-Pacific's statewide investments have totaled approximately $1.6 billion. Located in southwest Alabama, Georgia Pacific's Naheola pulp and paper mill began operations in 1959.

WARRIOR TOMBIGBEE WATERWAY ASSOCIATION ANNUAL MEETING

The Warrior Tombigbee Waterway Association held its annual meeting in Point Clear, Alabama, in July, after being rescheduled due to COVID-19. Both virtual and in-person meetings were held with all precautions for social distancing and face coverings in place.

Members had the opportunity to hear updates from leaders with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers including Col. Sebestien Joly, Commander, Mobile District; Wynne Fuller, Chief, Operations Division; Anthony Perkins, Operations Project Manager, Black Warrior-Tombigbee Waterway; and Justin Murphree, Operations Project Manager, Tennessee Tombigbee Waterway. Representatives Capt. LaDonn Allen, Sector Commander, and Lt. Cmmdr. Kelley Brown, Sector Mobile from the U.S. Coast Guard also provided updates. Julie Ufner, newly appointed president of the National Waterways Conference, spoke on water resources, regulations and authorizations.

John Driscoll, director and CEO of the Alabama State Port Authority, provided updates on the Port of Mobile. Attendees also heard presentations virtual and in person from Patrick Cagle, Alabama Coal Association; Frivana Shah, Eviva; and Scott Haskew, AM/NS Calvert, on the state of the coal, woodchip and steel industries in Alabama. In addition, the annual meeting included presentations on economic development for inland ports from Aimee Andrews, executive director, IRPT; K.R. McKenzie, commercial director, Watco Companies; and Mayor Walter Porter Sr., mayor of the Port of Epes.

NATIONAL MARITIME DAY SOUND OFF TO ALABAMA'S SEAPORT AND TRANSPORTATION WORKERS

In tribute to Alabama's seaport and transportation workers, all vessels at berth or transiting the Port of Mobile on Friday, May 22, held a SOUND OFF at 12 p.m. CST. The SOUND OFF consisted of four short blasts on the ship's horn.

Each day, the Port of Mobile's maritime and transportation employees work the front lines to ensure goods stock our shelves, raw materials and components reach our factories, agricultural products reach their markets, and energy products power our lives. The Port's stevedores, trucking, railroad, ship, tow and push boat and channel dredging workers are essential to healthy supply chains that keep the economy moving.

At the Port of Mobile alone, vessel and cargo activity account for more than 153,000 Alabama jobs generating $25.1 billion in economic value for our region and state. Even throughout the COVID-19 pandemic, Alabama's transportation workers adjusted their schedules and work routines to ensure worker safety to safely transport the goods so vital to many jobs and the economy. The SOUND OFF was just one small way to raise awareness and recognize the important work transportation workers deliver. The Port also honored maritime workers with a National Maritime Day video that can be viewed on the official YouTube Channel of the Port of Mobile, Alabama - https://bit.ly/3c1J0Em.

BRITAIN'S FINAL ASSAULT

of the War of 1812 and depending on whether he or she had any opinion on the subject, the answer likely would be, "The Battle of New Orleans," in which General Andrew Jackson and a rag-tag army of soldiers, volunteers, Creoles, free men of color and, most famously, pirates under the command of Jean Lafitte, defended the city and handily whipped the British. Even most Mobilians might be surprised to learn that the final action in the war was not fought on the outskirts of the Crescent City but under the very nose of Mobile.

Founded by the French in 1702, Mobile had seen a virtual parade of flags fly overhead as the colonial city had changed hands several times: French, British, Spanish and, beginning in April 1813, American, As the War of 1812 ground on, the United States had recognized Mobile's strategic location, and Major General James Wilkinson, commanding U.S. forces in the city, had ordered a redoubt built on Mobile Point at the mouth of Mobile Bay. In June, Colonel John Bowyer was dispatched to complete construction of the fortification. The resulting fort, built of logs and packed sand, comprised 22,000 square feet ensconced by a 400-foot semi-circular wall facing the bay and two 60-foot walls connected to a bastion on the land side. The completed fort was named in Bowyer's honor. The Army manned the fort for about a year before Wilkinson's successor, Brigadier General Thomas Flournoy, ordered the troops to withdraw.

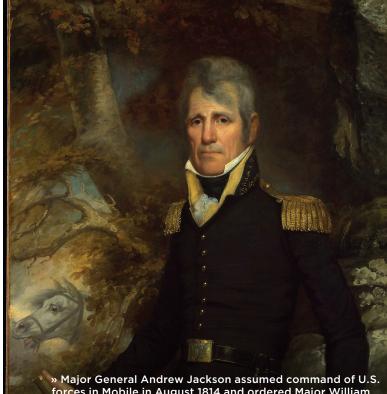

sk the average American to name the final battle Upon assuming command of U.S. forces at Mobile in August 1814, Major General Andrew Jackson guickly reversed the order, sending a force of 160 soldiers from the Second Infantry Division and under the command of Major William T. Lawrence to man the fort. Jackson believed the British planned to invest Mobile, and Lawrence's dozen artillery pieces would serve as the first line of defense against any attack by the British from the sea.

> The anticipated attack came less than a month later. As Jackson had intuited, the British planned to capture Mobile and use the city as a staging ground for an attack on New Orleans. With Mobile under British control and guarded by Royal Navy warships, the British would have been assured of a landing point for troops and supplies while denying access by the Americans. Plans called for British troops to march overland from Mobile to Natchez on the Mississippi River, where they could cut off New Orleans from the north and attack the city from that vantage point. The occupied area could also serve as an autonomous "Indian Territory." As envisioned by British strategists, this territory would be populated by their Creek allies and serve as a means to stop American expansion.

> On September 12, 1814, a squadron of four British warships and several smaller vessels under the command of Captain the Hon. William Henry Percy, arrived offshore. The flotilla consisted of the sixth-rate sloop-of-war HMS HERMES, » Begun in April 1813 as a redoubt on Mobile Point (modern-day Fort Morgan Peninsula), construction of the timber-and-sand fortification was overseen by Colonel John Bowyer, for whom the fort was named. Ft. Bowyer comprised 22,000 square feet and was built to provide defense of Mobile Bay.

forces in Mobile in August 1814 and ordered Major William Lawrence to take command of Ft. Bowyer to defend against an anticipated British attack.

22 guns, Percy's flagship; the sixth-rate post ship CARRON, 20 guns, commanded by the recently promoted Captain Robert Cavendish Spencer (third son of the second Earl Spencer); the brig-sloop CHILDERS, 18 guns, Commander John Brand Umpreville; and the brig-sloop SOPHIE, 18-guns, under the command of Commander Nicholas Lockyer, who had made a name for himself capturing numerous prizes during the war. Lockyer had only just returned from a meeting with Jean Lafitte in Barataria Bay during which he had tried to recruit the well-known pirate and his men to fight for the British.

Royal Marine Major Edward Nicolls-an Anglo-Irish officer known as "Fighting Nicolls"-landed some nine miles east of Ft. Bowyer with a force of 60 Colonial Marines, all of whom were former slaves or free men of color, and a contingent of approximately 60 Creek and Seminole Indian Colonial Marines led by the Jamaican-born Captain George Woodbine. Another 60 Indians under the command of First Lieutenant James Cassell were landed to the east north-east of the fort to guard the pass at Bon Secour.

After emplacing a 5 1/2-inch howitzer, Nicolls had withdrawn to the HERMES, suffering from a bout of dysentery. Hampered by unfavorable winds, the ships were unable to get underway until the afternoon of September 15, when they sailed in a line of battle into the bay. The fort's guns opened on the little fleet at 4:00 p.m., and within 20 minutes the battle was in earnest, with Major Lawrence noting that the fort took fire "from two ships and two brigs, as they approached." The Colonial Marines also opened on the fort, but their single howitzer proved ineffective, and they were soon silenced by the superior gunnery of the Americans.

HERMES anchored nearest the guns of Ft. Bowyer, where she took withering fire. On deck, Major Nicolls suffered head and leg wounds from flying splinters. The battle raged until 7:00 p.m. After a shot from the fort parted the HERMES' cable and the flagship drifted to within 600 yards of the American battery, Captain Percy ordered his men to fire and abandon ship. Lawrence reported, "At 10 P.M. we had the pleasure of witnessing the explosion of her magazine." The other ships now withdrew to a safe distance, bringing the engagement to an end.

The battle marked a complete victory by the American forces. Not only had HMS HERMES been destroyed, the flagship had suffered casualties of 17 killed in action, nine mortally wounded and another 19 wounded. SOPHIE's losses included six killed in action, four mortally wounded and 12 additional wounded. HMS CARRON's casualties included one mortally wounded sailor and five wounded individuals. One Colonial Marine had been killed. In contrast, the butcher's bill for the Americans included four dead and five wounded. Not only had the squadron and the landing parties been stopped, the plan to capture Mobile and attack New Orleans from the north had been thwarted, forcing the British to attempt a frontal assault on the city in January 1815.

The British suffered a humiliating defeat at New Orleans. but Andrew Jackson failed to press the attack and allowed the enemy to effect a successful withdrawal to their fleet, with the last of the troops embarking on January 28. A coastal storm blew in the next, keeping the ships at their anchorages until February 5, when they sailed westward. Admiral Sir Alexander Cochrane gave instructions for the fleet to make for Dauphin Island at the mouth of Mobile Bay, where repairs could be made and the battered men and ships could be attended to.

» HMS SOPHIE, Commander John Lockyer commanding, joined HERMES as the two ships nearest the fort during the shelling.

Meanwhile, Jackson had ordered Ft. Bowyer reinforced. William Lawrence, promoted to the rank of lieutenant colonel following his successful defense of the fort in September, now commanded a force of 370 officers and men from the Second Infantry Division and an artillery battery of 22 cannon. Jackson had boasted of the fort that "ten thousand men cannot take it!" In reality, while well suited to defend against a land attack, Ft. Bowyer now was overcrowded, providing refuge to some three dozen women and children and lacking adequate defense for its gunners who would be exposed during battle as the guns were mounted so as to fire over the tops of the ramparts.

Commanding the British troops, Major General John Lambert believed that if British forces could take Ft. Bowyer, Mobile would fall, and they could have a second chance of attacking New Orleans. This time, the British had the resources they needed.

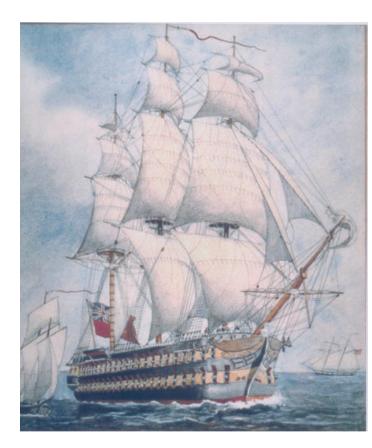

The fleet hove into view on February 7, 1815, a surprising and intimidating view to those at Ft. Bowyer who counted more than three dozen British warships on the horizon. The following day, Lambert landed some 1,300 troops from the 4th, 21st and 44th Regiments of Foot east of the fort to cut it off from reinforcement by land. More troops were landed on Dauphin Island and placed in reserve. Under the cover of sand dunes, the British advanced to within 200 yards of the fort. That night, they began digging a series of approach trenches. American observers could make out the dark figures of the British against the white sand, and rained down accurate and deadly artillery fire on the work party, but the soldiers heroically continued their efforts, coming within 30 yards of the fort.

Stung by their earlier defeat at Bowyer, the British now emplaced four 18-pounder cannon, two 8-inch howitzers and five mortars. Admiral Cochrane's flagship, HMS TONNANT, also landed a 25-man detachment of Royal Marine Artillery under the command of Lt. John Lawrence, bringing with them two six-pounder rockets, 100 12-pounder rockets and a number of Congreve rocket launchers, an overpowering display of firepower. Additionally, the enemy was prepared to use shrapnel and incendiary and explosive shells during the bombardment. Troops from the 85th Regiment of Foot now were transported from Dauphin Island in final preparation for the coming battle. Offshore could be seen heavy ships of the line, frigates, schooners, sloops-of-war and bomb ketches, bristling with guns, mortars and well-armed Royal Marines and sailors.

American reinforcements, including more than 1,000 men of the 3rd and 39th Infantry, along with another 200 volunteer militiamen and Indians, were situated at Mobile more than 30 miles up the bay. Orders were given that the Americans would sail "with the first fair wind," but it was too late. Lt. Colonel William Lawrence knew that any defense of Ft. Bowyer would be suicidal; however, it was not until the two sides had exchanged artillery fire that a truce was called and terms of surrender discussed. Lawrence surrendered to the British on February 12, his men marching out and rendered proper military honors by the British as they lay down their arms and handed over their colors. Lawrence was taken prisoner.

» This diagram depicts the positions and movements of the British during the First Battle of Fort Bowyer.

Unbeknownst to Lawrence, reinforcements from Mobile finally had the favorable winds they had been awaiting and had departed from the port city late on February 11. Arriving on the Eastern Shore some 12 miles above the fort on the morning of the 12th, the Americans captured a barge manned by 17 Royal Navy sailors, who informed the U.S. troops of Ft. Bowver's surrender. The Second Battle of Ft. Bowyer had come to an end. Casualties included one American killed and 10 wounded, while the British suffered losses of 13 killed and 18 wounded. Before Lambert could organize an attack on the city at the head of the bay, HMS BRAZEN arrived from Jamaica on February 14 with the news that a peace treaty had been signed on December 24. The war was over. The battle at the mouth of Mobile Bay was the final land action of the War of 1812.

» A fleet of 38 British warships appeared off the mouth of Mobile Bay on February 7, 1815, heralding one final assault on Ft. Bowyer.
