MAGGIE OLIVER

Vice President of Communications and Federal Affairs

Maggie began her career in Washington, D.C., working in the public policy and political communications space. In 2018, Maggie relocated to Mobile, Alabama to start her family with her husband, Todd, and to support their family business, Budweiser Busch Distributing. Following three years of advocating for Mobile-area businesses at the Mobile Chamber of Commerce, Maggie now serves as the Vice President of Communications & Federal Affairs for the Alabama Port Authority.

Maggie has a master's degree in Public Relations and Corporate Communications from Georgetown University and a bachelor's degree in Public Policy Leadership from the University of Mississippi's Trent Lott Leadership Institute. She is also proud to serve on the National Board of Directors for Distinguished Young Women, where she is the immediate past president.
